Dear Friend,

Thank you for your desire to include Gleanings for the Hungry in your estate plan. We are very thankful for these gifts, as they have a powerful impact on the financial stability of our organization.

A bequest is the most popular way to make a gift through your estate. This is because all of your assets are still available to you during your lifetime. This is important as we never know what our needs may be as we grow older. Because the bequest happens after your death, you are simply giving what you no longer have need of.

Most people make the bequest a percentage of their estate. That way, they are assured that everyone will be remembered in proportion to what they have. You can choose to designate all or portions of your gift to various areas of need. Designations can be made to a single purpose, or many. Gifts that do not have a designation will go to the Gleanings General Fund, to be used where most needed.

We are thankful for whatever you may do, and assure you the funds will be used as directed.

Allow us to share some information that will be helpful:

Sincerely,

Fritz Meier
